OREGON

There will be a grand ball and supper at Harrisburg on Christmas

All the Sunday Schools of Hillsboro will unite in the approaching Christmas festivities.

Dr J W Watts has we learn been appointed Postmaster of Lafayette, vice R L Simpson, resigned

The Albany Collegiate Institute opened the winter term last Monday with over one hundred students

Dr Hill has succeeded in raising about $20,000 for the endowment of the Baptist College at McMinnville

The young ladies of Albany will give a grand Leap Year ball next Friday, at which a good time is expected

Hon D Logan of Yambill county lately went on a hunt in the Coast Range Mountains and captured 7 large elk

Between four and five thousand dollars of subscriptions to aid in rebuilding the woolen mills have been raised at Oregon City.

Hauxhurst, the man shot by Wilson, is, according to late advices from Tillamook, fast recovering, and in a fair way to get entirely well

A petition will soon be in circulation for the establishment of a mail route from Union via Cove, Summerville, Indian Valley, to the Wallowa.

Citizens of Indian Valley, Union county, seriously complain of coyotes being numerous and troublesome Traps and strychnine are in demand

The Enterprise says the locks at Linn City will be completed within three weeks from this date But one gate remains to be hung and another partially

Mr. A B Meacham, who was selected by the Electors as the messenger to carry the returns to Washington, will start next Tuesday overland by way of Boise and Kelton

The Enterprise suggest the idea of the printers of Oregon rearing a monument to the memory of the late John Fleming, of Oregon City, who died a few days since, being the pioneer printer, and the oldest member of the craft on this coast.

The La Grande Sentinel says "A gentleman just from Weston, Oregon via Thomas & Ruckles' Road, reports the snow ten inches deep on the summit of the Blue Mountains Parties just over from Wallowa report the snow six inches deep in the middle valley.

A W Wyland, sentenced to sixty days confinement in the jail at Oregon City walked out of that institution the other day, having only served out half the term The Enterprise intimates that he saw the penitentiary gaping for him if he remained, and as the jail was not at all secure he concluded not to stay his time out

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Willamette Falls Canal and Lock Company, which was held at the company's office in Linn City, December 3d, 1872, the following gentlemen were elected Directors for the ensuing year · B Goldsmith, M Goldsmith, Joseph Teal, R. R Thompson, Phil Wasserman, and Jno. F Miller

Brigadier General Mart V. Brown, of the Albany Democrat, was a candidate for Mayor at the late municipal election in his city, and was buried in defeat under an overwhelming majority of one, whereupon he condoles with himself thusly "We have met the enemy and got away with 'em —in a porcine quadruped's optical organ! That is to say, we have been 'scooped up' with a slight exception "

The Bedrock Democrat has this from the Eagle Creek section There is no snow in Eagle Creek Valley, at Gem City, Sparta and Hogem it is from one to two inches deep Times are pretty dull, except at Hogem The quartz mills which were run by water power have closed down on account of the cold weather Those run by steam power —one at Hogem and one at Gem—are pounding away on good rock

The Democrat says ' An old gentleman named Wiseman, who resides at Brownsville, while out in the mountains with a hunting party last week, got separated from his companions while following a wounded deer, and wandered about in the mountains for four days before being found When discovered he had his shot pouch full of jerked venison and was fat and jolly, having suffered none from hunger and but little from exposure."

The Mercury says Last week we were shown a letter to General Miller from the Klamath country, dated November 23th The letter states that stock of all kinds are doing well, and that but little snow has fallen General Miller has some 3 000 head of sheep in that locality, all of which, he is informed, are healthy and in fine condition. There is said to be an abundance of white sage, similar in leaf to the Scotch heather, throughout the Klamath and Link river country Growing to a height of three or four feet, and possessing rare nutritious qualities, animals of all kinds thrive throughout the winter months.

The Statesman says ' Some time, we think last year, a discovery of electro silicon was made in Polk county by Mr Al Buckingham Small quantities of it were tested, but we are not aware that anything was done at the time to render the discovery of practical value Lately a small lot of it was tested at the Oregon and California Railroad car shops The Chief Engineer at once pronounced it an excellent polishing material, and stated to our informant that if, upon further test, it should prove as good as he then believed it, he should immediately order a larger quantity for staple use in the shops We have since learned the Engineer did order a considerable quantity, and that he has expressed the opinion that the deposit will prove valuable to the owner "

A WIFE'S POWER.—The power of a wife, for good or for evil, is irresistible Home must be the seat of happiness or it must be forever unknown A good wife is to a man wisdom, courage and strength, a bad one is confusion, weakness and despair. No condition is hopeless to a man where the wife possesses firmness, decision and economy There is no outward propriety which can counteract indolence, extravagance and folly at home No spirit can long endure bad influence Man is strong but his heart is not adamant He delights in enterprise and action but to sustain him he needs a tranquil mind, and especially if he is an intellectual man with a whole head, he needs his moral forces in the conflicts of life To recover his composure, home must be a place of peace, of cheerfulness and comfort There his soul renews its strength and goes forth with fresh vigor to encounter the labor and troubles of life But if at home he finds no rest, and is there met with bad temper, sullenness, jealousy and gloom, or is assailed by complaints and censure, hope vanishes and he sinks into despair Such is the case with too many who, might seem, have no conflicts or trials of life, for such is the wife's power.

The Transcript says An artesian well on the Puyallup, 131 feet deep has been sunk on alluvial deposit The water has risen to within six feet of the surface, but is not of first quality The soil at that depth was as good as at the surface.

By Overland Telegraph.

William Donovan the murderer of George Mitchell, will be executed here next Friday He is apparently resigned to his fate

A man named Cooper, who at one time had some connection with the Diamond Drill Company is the person who explained the manner in which the diamond fields were "salted" Some of the stones the Drill Company used there were mixed with others purchased by Arnold, and with rubies and garnets which he procured from Indians in Arizona. Arnold made two or three trips for "salting" purposes and once took back a lot of gems which Slack had picked up and returned to the place of wealth by Arnold's order It is said indictments against Arnold, Black and Cooper will be presented to the grand jury to-day

On the 28th of November William Madison was washed overboard from the schooner Mendocino, near Point Arena, and drowned

BRITISH COLUMBIA

From Victoria.

VICTORIA, Dec. 6 —Yesterday the new Christ Church Cathedral was consecrated In the evening Archdeacon Reese preached a sermon in which he warmly advocated the adoption of Ritualism with all the forms and ceremonies connected therewith He said the church of England had been dead for the last century and predicted its decay unless Ritualism were adopted The sermon was listened to with ill concealed indignation by the congregation. At its close Deacon Cridge said he raised his protest against the views expressed by Archdeacon Reese They were wrong and he would not again sit quietly and listen to their expression The congregation here gave vent to their feelings by stamping and clapping, during which a number of ladies retired precipitately After the service was over the congregation gathered in twos and groups and discussed the matter in a very excited manner.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

SEATTLE, Dec 6 —The captain of a vessel lately arrived at Tacoma reports that he passed through miles of lumber when opposite the mouth of the Columbia There is little doubt but that this is the cargo of the missing schooner Walter Raleigh Capt Hanson, which sailed from Freeport for San Francisco over six weeks ago with lumber

In the District Court Quayle, alias "Poker Jack," Dayle and Butler, all charged with murder were acquitted

The condemned bark Scotland was sold at auction today for $2,000

THE TERRITORIES.

One hundred miles of snow fences have been put up along the line of the Union Pacific Railroad.

An Olympia paper says the bark Scotland now being repaired at Seattle will probably be sold at auction

There are four thousand three hundred and fifty one volumes in the Territorial Library at Olympia, besides a great number of unbound miscellaneous matter.

The dwelling house of Nicholas Wetzell, situated on the upper Payette in the Boise country was totally destroyed by fire a short time ago. The loss is estimated at two thousand dollars.

James Trimlet, a Devonshire man and a discharged marine, died suddenly at San Juan. He left Victoria last Thursday by the Eagle. He was then apparently well, but he sickened on the passage and died last Friday. Heart disease it is thought

Quite a large number of Immigrants, who came up on the Idaho to Victoria and from thence on the North Pacific, reached Seattle on Tuesday last. Among the number were five families from Maine, one from New Brunswick and one from California

The correspondent of the Seattle Intelligencer is now very complimentary to Port Townsend. He says "If there is just such another place in the world as Port Townsend, I would feel under lasting obligations to some kind friend if he would point out its location to me on the map, so that I could avoid it in case I should ever start out to roam away from the "festive scenes" that cluster around the shores of Puget Sound.

The Seattle Intelligencer of the 2nd inst., says: "Messrs John S McAllister, George F. Whitworth and C B Bagley, on Monday last effected the leasing of their coal mine on Cedar river, known as the Coal Mountain, lying about 18 or 20 miles east of this city The lessee is a gentleman named George W. Tew, from Kansas City, Missouri The property is let for a term of ninety-nine years, for the sum of $2,500 down, and the further sums of $2,000 on the 1st of July, 1873, $9,000 on the 1st of July, 1874, and $9,000 more one year thereafter, making altogether the sum of $22,500.

The Seattle paper says. "We have been furnished the following in reference to Mr. Richard Fay, whose death in this city on the 2d ult., we announced in our last issue. He arrived here on the 26th of October last in a very debilitated condition, having just come from the Eastern States, via San Francisco, and not having partaken of any food since he left Omaha, until reaching this place. He put up at the Occidental, and stated this fact to the proprietor, and gave as a reason for his going to such extremes, that he had had a disagreement with a brother of his at Philadelphia, with whom he was engaged in the painting business extensively at that city, and that he had left in consequence, and going to New York, continued on to San Francisco, and finally came here. His mind was not at all times wholly rational.

Letter from Hon J. M. Fletcher.

VANCOUVER, W. T., Dec. 5, 1872.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

The Kalama Beacon, of the 30th ult., has an article from an "Enquirer," who is troubled about my naturalization, and who has searched the records of the District Court here and finds no entry therein showing such naturalization

Now, I frankly admit that I was born in England, but I was very young at the time, and really could do nothing to prevent it. It was not my fault at all, but just a freak of perverse fortune

Since the Beacon has called my attention to the matter, I have diligently searched the records of the court here, and from all there is there I am unable to tell whether I am naturalized or not. I am very sorry, but the District Court will meet here next April, and I will then take out my naturalization papers, if I should at that time deem it to be necessary.

Yours truly, J. M. FLETCHER.

SATURDAY MORNING DECEMBER 1872

Diamond Cut Diamond

Scarcely less reprehensible than the Arizona diamond swindle was the recent corner in the stock of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway Company in which Jay Gould was the principal operator and out of which he is said to have realized a large amount of money The Northwestern as this stock is commonly called on change is the common stock of the company above named as contra distinguished from its "preferred" stock and has been quotable generally at about $60 per share fluctuating above and below this figure, not over ten or twelve dollars either way It has therefore been regarded as good stock for the purposes of speculation

Just before the Boston conflagration this stock began to advance Steadily it rose, and, of course, became the center of attraction among the gamblers And when immediately after the Boston fire, all other stocks in the country dropped, Northwestern stood firm and alone This circumstance awakened the suspicion of foul play By the following Friday the matter was worked up to the desired point, and the corner came In a few hours Northwestern went up from 70 to 90, then to 95 and then leaped to 110 This was ominous but it did not stop there Up it went to 160 to 200 and to 230 by Monday Those who were "short" in that stock and had to meet contracts while the market stood in this situation were ruined The conspirators who had brought about this state of affairs were in a condition to demand any price, and the "shorts" had no alternative but to pay the price demanded. It was a squeezing process in which the small operators were to be squeezed dry Whether the conspirators succeeded, in spite of the legal proceedings that were instituted in holding the stock up to the point to which they had inflated it, long enough to accomplish all they designed originally, nobody but themselves knows or ever will know That they made a large amount of money by the transaction before the collapse of the inflated stocks, the papers all agree

The Pittsburg Leader endorses the statement of Dr Holland that this class of stock operators ought to be regarded in moral society as other malefactors are, and sees in their operations in the corner in Northwestern only one feature that distinguishes them from any vulgar robbery That paper says

> But though this illustrates the rascality of these gentlemen "cornerers" so well it does not follow that we are to pity those who have suffered in this case, as we should pity those suffering by a wheat corner, or a corner in gold or greenbacks In these latter cases, legitimate trade is deranged, and many innocent persons are made to suffer by the operations of stock gamblers In the former case scarcely any "Northwestern common" is what they call a purely speculative stock It has we believe, paid no dividends for several years, and consequently is scarcely of any value whatever as a legitimate investment It is therefore invested in almost solely by speculators, men who risk a possible fall in its value, for the sake of winning on its rises. The present loss, therefore, is suffered by gamblers rather than legitimate investors, by men who for the most part would, without the slightest hesitation, go into "corners" themselves, and do go into them when they get a chance. In fact the heaviest loser in this squeeze is said to be the famous Daniel Drew, whose "corner" operations are only less notorious and unscrupulous than those of Commodore Vanderbilt himself Our pity, then, upon the squeezed would be almost entirely wasted It has been diamond cut diamond, and the cut diamond may cut the other in another to-morrow Small pity to any of them

The Death of Deacon Naylor.

One after another the old settlers who led the vanguard of American civilization as it came to the shores of the Pacific are called away We have to chronicle the death of Deacon T G Naylor, of Washington county, which occurred on Thursday evening, Dec 5, at his residence at Forest Grove

Deacon Naylor was one of the early pioneers of Oregon He was a native of Virginia, but came to this country in 1845 or 1846 He was an active and prominent member and deacon of the Congregational Church He was also a member of the Board of Trustees of Pacific University, of which institution he proved himself a fast friend in ways more substantial than words He was one of the most prominent agriculturists of the State, and those who attended the meetings of the Board of Managers of the State Agricultural Society always expected to find him on hand, full of suggestions and ready to act in all matters looking to improvement in the modes of farming and in the means of promoting an interest in agricultural pursuits

As a neighbor and as a citizen, there are few men in the State who would be more missed than Deacon Naylor, or whose places will be harder to fill when they are gone

Sickness and death have made an especial make of eminent Americans during the few months last past Seward and Greeley have died, Vice President Colfax and Gen Frank P Blair have had strokes of paralysis, Judge Nelson, of the United States Supreme Court, has become too feeble to discharge his official duties, and has retired from the bench in consequence thereof, and now Charles Sumner is attacked by heart disease so severely as to make it necessary, in the opinion of his physician for him to be excused from the labor of Senatorial Committees

J D. Culp, of Gilroy, California has obtained a patent for a new process of curing tobacco, by which he claims that the curing can be done as well in a dry climate as in the moist, warm climate of Cuba It is generally understood that the superiority of Cuban tobacco is attributable more to the curing than to any inherent peculiarity of the leaf Mr Culp thinks that under his process of curing, California can be made as great a tobacco country as any in the world

At the June election the vote of Oregon stood for Wilson, 13,167, for Burnett 12 317 In the Presidential election the vote stood, Grant, 11,813; Greeley, 7,745, O Conor, 587 The Republican vote fell off 1 354, the Democratic, not counting O Conor's vote, fell off 4 572. Adding Greeley's and O'Conor's votes together, the Democratic decrease is still 3,985

The bail of Woodhull and Claflin has been reduced and they have obtained the bonds men required. They are once more at liberty, though awaiting the result of proceedings that will in all probability return them to prison It is stated they have no means with which to pay a fine

The States that were carried by Greeley and Brown are Maryland Georgia Kentucky Tennessee, Missouri and Texas, and probably Louisiana and Arkansas How these States voted in the Electoral Colleges on Wednesday is not reported

At the late term of court held at Seattle E M Gibson, David W Smith and C L Lamb were admitted to practice law

LITERARY CHAT

When one a fancy groping through the corridors of the mind feels about attempting to grasp the substance of some vanished thought—while as a dream the vision flits before him then is gone and is yet again recalled by some suggestive circumstance and is suddenly passes away until he abandon in despair the pursuit what a feeling of dissatisfaction takes hold of the mind Such are the emotions excited by reading, Tennyson's Gareth and Lynette We are continually though vainly attempting to recall the author of whose writing the one in hand reminds us We see here and there glimmerings which almost persuade us that it is Tennyson whom we are trying to bring to mind we read a little farther and we are lost again We close the book with the feeling that the writer may make a poet some day but his claims as such will not be based upon anything contained between these two covers The poem is very short, and is simply an amplification of an extremely ridiculous love story It completes the Arthurian legends for which we are truly grateful Gareth and Lynette is above gramatical criticism and that is something

Nor can Dr Holland's Marble Prophecy be deemed in any measure a success, unless it be in diligently searching the dictionary for ponderous epithets to hurl against Catholicism He takes his lesson from the group Laocoon in the Vatican at Rome, and the burden of his song is that "Christian Rome has Failed" He appears thoroughly in earnest, but he has sacrificed to this earnestness of his hatred all those poetical refinements which constitute an easy and flowing diction, and which he, at times, seems so capable of employing Of the other poems in the volume one cannot entertain any very exalted opinion though some of them like the "Heart of the War," evince no inconsiderable degree of beauty, we think none of the lines here given to the public are in Dr Holland's happiest manner

A totally worthless book is truly a despicable object, and were it not that its utter worthlessness being brought into contrast with the good qualities of our more excellent books compels us to prize them the higher, its existence should not be tolerated Such a book is The Outcast and other Poems, by J W Watson, "author of Beautiful Snow." We doubt very much whether he every wrote Beautiful Snow, for nothing in this book would indicate that he could do so But what if he did write it? There is nothing in that poem but a little fancy that pleases a class whom a legitimate writer would not care to please But this last book, so utterly "devoid of rhyme and reason," exhibits even a greater lack of poetry and sense than the worst of Bret Harte's wanderings There is not a single poem in the volume that can bear commendation The author appears to have very little idea of metrical construction, and what little he does possess he uses to a very poor advantage

Evidently Darwin intends during his life to make record every argument that in the least tends to establish the truth of his pet theory Under the title Expression of Emotions in Man and Animals, he comes up, with his handful of gathered leaves from one of the many by paths that lead into his great road "Kinship" The book is, as the local and London papers style it, a "solid and closely packed volume," and must needs of course be studied, not read. The intention of the present volume, says the author, is to show that all the chief expressions exhibited by man are the same throughout the world, corroborating the theory of descent from a single parent stock instead of aboriginally distinct species

Another work from the same school of thinkers has lately made its appearance—Evolution of Life, by H C Chapman M D The book contains no new facts and seems to be nothing more than a "toadying" to the aristocracy of the minds of Spencer and his followers—the mere expression of a desire by some man to have his name spoken of in connection with those who have thoroughly prospected the ground before him Even if the evolution theory be tenable we do not see the necessity of having Mr Chapman rehearse what has been far more ably presented to us before What good will result from a reiteration of that one theory if he goes no deeper For although we may be descended from monkeys, the query still comes back to us "Who made the monkeys?

Mr Edmund Yates, novelist and lecturer, is engaged in the commendable business of amusing and enlightening the knickerbockers of Manhattan Island upon literary subjects In his lecture on Good Authors at a Discount he set down Tennyson as one who is not truly appreciated and Spenser as little read and less understood, in the world He also placed Philip James Bailey's Festus, and Alexander Smith's Life Drama, as specimens of the "Spasmodic Drama," deserving of greater attention than they receive Which reminds us that if Aytoun's Firmilian were more familiar to the American literati, the Eastern papers would cease to credit Mr Yates as the author of the phrase "Spasmodic school of poetry"

And while Mr Yates is discoursing of unappreciated authors, Mr Anthony Trollope stops over at Chicago on his tour of inspection around the world, and is interviewed by that inevitable and ubiquitous personage, the newspaper correspondent, to whom he communicates his opinion that Mr Yates is a pretender and a popinjay and is unduly appreciated as an author, wherever he is appreciated at all Such is literary fame

The Internal Revenue Service

The Washington dispatches published this morning indicate a reorganization of the system of assessing and collecting the Internal Revenue. The plan proposed by the two bills, one of them coming from the House Committee on Ways and Means, is to abolish the office of Assessor and place the entire service in the hands of the Collectors This is doubtless the same plan devised by Commissioner Douglas the particulars of which appear in the following Washington special to a New York paper under date of November 20th

Commissioner Douglas has matured a substitute for the proposed consolidation of Internal Revenue districts which is so much simpler, and which, in its economical results will be so much more effective that there is very little doubt but Congress will probably approve it The Commissioner proposes to lay it before the Ways and Means and Finance Committees as soon as Congress assembles The President has expressed himself heartily in its favor as also have several of the prominent Supervisors of Internal Revenue who have been made acquainted with its provisions The main features of the plan are the abolition of the offices of Assessor and assistant Assessor and the transfer of duties now performed by them to Collectors, and to the Internal Revenue office itself As there are 230 Assessors costing, with their offices an average of $5 000 per annum each the reduction of expenditure on this item alone would be $1 150 000 There are 1 100 Assistant Assessors who average $1 500 per annum each and this would effect a further saving of $1 650,000 or an aggregate on both items of upward of $3 000 000 This would not be wholly a net saving, but there is no question but that the aggregate reduction of the expense of assessing and collecting the revenue would be over $2 000 000 The practicability of this plan is its chief recommendation There are now but three classes of duties performed by Assessors which a Collector may not perform with equal propriety and it is proposed to devolve those duties upon the Internal Revenue office itself which can be done by increasing its clerical force not to exceed twenty five—and by the addition of twenty five Revenue agents to those already in existence Those three classes of duties are as follows The deficiency tax on distillers the assessment of which is now made upon data furnished by the Storekeepers and is furnished daily to the Internal Revenue office The latter can furnish the lists to the Collectors just as well as the Assessors who now do it The next class is that comprising special taxes and licenses, which it is proposed to collect through the means of license certificates like beer and whisky stamps bound in books and sent to Collectors who will be charged with them and who will sell and account for them the same as other stamps The third class is the collection of the tax on banks This tax on corporations was all formerly collected here, and it can as easily be done now It is proposed to require the banks to make their returns to the Collector, as they do now to the Assessor, and to send duplicates to the Internal Revenue office here which will open an account with each bank crediting it when paid, and charging each Collector with every duplicate return forwarded So many obstacles have been encountered in attempting to carry out the consolidation of districts, required by the law as it now stands, that this simpler and more effective method has gradually been suggested One great drawback to a consolidation is that it is in many cases absolutely impossible that the proper surveillance over fifteen or twenty counties and in some instances over a whole State, should be exercised by a single Assessor and Collector and the interests of the revenue must inevitably suffer The increased economy of the new plan is at once apparent, as well as the result of preserving the efficiency of the service Moreover, it is much more in consonance with the true spirit of retrenchment and reform to obliterate a whole class of officials at one sweep, by an act of Congress, than to throw that arduous, delicate and thankless duty upon the President and his Commissioners

The St Louis Democrat is entitled to credit for this A romantic and somewhat tragical event, involving love and possibly murder—a funeral and a marriage—is reported as having occurred in Lawrence, Kansas, recently A young mulatto named William Drake, whose course of true love was somewhat roughened by the opposition of his proposed father in law, waylaid a funeral cortege on its return from the cemetery, and with the assistance of three of his brothers, shot the old man abducted the girl, took her to Lawrence, and was married in the street—the constable who had him in arrest kindly waiting until the ceremony was performed, before taking the bridegroom to the calaboose Jordan Cownch, the girl's father, is seriously wounded

MARRIED:

CITY.

SET ADRIFT.—During the recent heavy gales which prevailed on the Columbia, a large scow moored at the wharf at Collins' Landing, was blown loose and set adrift in the stream, having on board five men. Collins' Landing is twelve miles above the Upper Cascades and is a point at which the steamers touch to "wood up." An extensive wood yard at the above named landing is owned by Mr. Collins, after whom the locality takes its name. Alongside the pier on which the wood is piled, was moored a large scow. The barge adjusted itself to the stage of water, and was used as a sort of floating wharf, so that steamers could come alongside and conveniently receive the wood. On the evening in question, a terrible gale arose about 4 o'clock. The wind continued to increase in fury until Mr. Collins and four other men employed about the yard, deeming the scow insecurely fastened to the wharf, took some ropes and went on board to make the moorings more safe. Ten cords of wood had previously been thrown in the bottom of the boat. While the men were engaged in lashing the scow to the wharf, the rope already attached to the pier parted, and the boat drifted rapidly out into the stream. One of the men seeing the rope break, leaped on the wharf and thus escaped. The old scow drifted out to the middle of the river and then moved down the current. The wind blew like a tornado and the river was exceedingly rough. The scow frequently "dipped" and those on board expected her to founder every moment. Not a single oar was on board the barge and no plank at hand out of which any could be made. Both men and boat were left to the mercy of the wind and waters. Meantime the boat was being borne down on the strong current. Soon the men were rendered painfully conscious of their danger. Without some providential intervention, the scow would drift over the falls! The men who had timely leaped ashore, procured a skiff, and although the gale was high and the waters were boisterous, he put off from the wharf with the intention of carrying a line from the scow to the shore. After narrowly escaping being swamped several times, the scow was reached, but it was found impossible to get back to the land in the skiff. Four or five miles were passed, when favored by fortune, the wind blew the barge ashore at a bend in the river. Darkness, however, had set in sometime before, and the men were compelled to spend a cold and comfortless night as best they could. The following day the wind abated its violence, and permitted the party to cross in the skiff to the opposite shore, and the men "footed" the distance back to the landing. The scow and wood were both lost. The men were absent about 36 hours. Great uneasiness was experienced by those who saw the boat drift off, and were unable to render any assistance. Until the safety of the party was assured beyond all doubt by their appearance, the impression prevailed that scow and all had floated over the falls.

AT THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—The telegraph informs us that the death of Horace Greeley was the theme of remark in many Eastern pulpits last Sunday morning. In this city the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church was engaged at the same time in the same manner.

Dr. Lindsley spoke of the distinguished position of one who so lately occupied a large share of public attention, and who, as the chosen leader of a host, had just passed through one of the most exciting Presidential contests known to our annals. The transitory nature of earthly possessions, the feeble grasp on temporal honors were the sad [illegible] illustrated in this startling event, which sounded a note of warning to every man who was setting his heart on worldly good.

The speaker enforced the lesson of the hour by illustrations drawn from the closing experiences of eminent Americans, quoting among others the words of Thomas H. Benton, Henry Clay and Daniel Webster. Such references strengthened the position of the discourse, which was a logical and conclusive display of the only source of peace and consolation, revealed in the text, "O, Lord, whom have I in Heaven but Thee! and there is none upon the earth that I desire besides Thee! My heart, and my flesh fail, but Thou art the strength of my heart, and my portion forever."—Psalms 73.25, 26.

Dr. Lindsley gave notice that his subject next Sunday evening would be, "Christianity in the British Isles," with special reference to the Reformation in the times of Knox—a subject appointed by the last General Assembly of the church.

KINDLY GREETING.—Last evening the members of Samaritan Lodge No. 2, I. O. O. F., visited in a body Hassalo Lodge No. 15, at the Odd Fellows' Hall, in this city. The reunion of the members of these sister Lodges proved a most happy, social occasion. A large number from both Lodges were present and some time spent in very agreeable intercourse. By an unexpected coincidence, it so happened that the members of Chemeketa Lodge No. 1, of Salem, met last evening at their hall to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the organization of that lodge. The fact being known to the members of Samaritan and Hassalo Lodges, the following dispatch was forwarded to Salem:

"PORTLAND, Dec 5, 1872.

To the N. G., officers and members of Chemeketa Lodge, No. 11, Salem, Oregon:

The officers and members of Samaritan Lodge, No 2, and Hassalo Lodge, No. 15, in joint meeting, assembled in their hall, send you kindly greetings on this, the twentieth anniversary of the organization of your lodge, and rejoice with you on the success of our Order throughout the State."

Several hours were harmoniously spent by the two lodges in the interchange of social and brotherly converse, after which they adjourned.

NEW DROP CURTAIN.—For the last week or two the scenic artist at Oro Fino Theater has been engaged in painting a new and very handsome drop curtain at Armory Hall. Yesterday we called and inspected this acquisition to the scenic appointments of the theater. The curtain is but little better than a bulletin board used for advertising purposes. It is a novel and ingenious "advertising dodge," and the credit of the invention and introduction here belongs to Mr. W. R. Forbeth, a member of the present company. In the center of the curtain is a magnificent view of Mount Hood and a stretch of the Cascades. The scene is taken from a beautiful inland lake, surrounded by rugged mountains. All around the edges of the scene are oblong spaces marked out, and separated by lines of paint and gold leaf. A great many of these spaces are already "taken" by firms of the city, and their names, places, and character of business are painted inside the allotted limits. This curtain was hung last night after the close of the performance, and can be seen for the first time at the matinee this afternoon.

BRIDGE PLANS.—With the exception of a few modifications the plans for the Wallamet bridge have been approved by the Board of Engineers of the Pacific coast. A meeting of this Board was held very recently in San Francisco, Major H. M. Robert, of this city, composing one of the corps. The plans have been forwarded to Washington to meet the approval of the Secretary of War and receive his signature. The conditions of the approval are that the bridge is to be ten feet above high water mark, and that the location for the western terminus shall be two blocks above or below Asylum street. Work will probably be commenced at once in good earnest by the company, with the assurance of success to be drawn from the fact that the Board have heartily endorsed the plans as submitted. Now that the Board have made sufficient after careful and scientific examination, there can be but little doubts about the approval of the Secretary of War.

THE OPERA TROUPE.—Negotiations we understand are still pending between certain parties in Portland and the Manager of Fabbri's Italian Opera Troupe, now performing at San Francisco. The object of such negotiations is to induce the troupe to come to this city and perform several nights, if satisfactory terms can be arranged. A few gentlemen of this city propose soon to call on the public for subscriptions in this behalf. If the citizens respond handsomely, and raise the required sum, the troupe will no doubt pay Portland a visit; otherwise we shall be deprived of hearing their artistic rendition of some of the compositions of the great musical masters.

ARRIVAL OF PRIESTS.—Among the arrivals by the steamship John L. Stephens are the Rev Fathers Verhaag and Orth, direct from the American College at Louvaine, Belgium, where they finished their theological studies and were ordained. Fathers Verhaag and Orth are destined to labor in the archdiocese of Oregon City.

MATERIALS.—A large raft of timber, lumber, etc., for the new railroad warehouse on the east side, has been towed from the lower saw-mill, to a point a short distance below the ferry landing. Work, it is expected will soon be commenced on the foundation of this contemplated building.

ODD FELLOWS' LIBRARY.—At the joint meeting held last evening at the Odd Fellows' Temple by the members of Samaritan and Hassalo Lodges, steps were taken to organize and establish a library for the amusement, instruction and edification of the order in Portland. A permanent organization was effected, the sum of $16 raised for the benefit of the library and 110 volumes contributed by members present as a "starter." This is certainly an encouraging commencement, and the few volumes already donated will no doubt form the nucleus of a large and miscellaneous collection of books ere long.

MAMMOTH SPOON.—A gigantic spoon—such a one only as the giants of Gulliver's Travels could use—was shown us yesterday at the saloon of Alex Campbell. To give one an idea of this spoon, the dimensions need only to be known. This spoon is seven feet and ten inches in length, weighs about fifty pounds, and the bowl will hold at least a peck. It is manufactured of Oregon ash by a gentleman who resides in Salem, and was sent as a present to Mr Campbell. This king of spoons will repay inspection.

STREET RAILWAY.—For the first time in the history of Portland, yesterday street cars were run over the first section of the street railway, from the intersection of F. street along First to Caruthers street, in the southern portion of the city. Everything is in readiness for the cars to run regularly. The equipments of the Company consist of four cars and ten horses, a large stable, etc. The track, turn table, etc., are all complete, so that you can deposit your fare, jump into the "keers" and all take a ride.

ARRIVED AT HONOLULU.—A letter bearing date of Honolulu Nov 12th, written by the first mate of the bark Garibaldi, was shown us last evening. The letter stated that the vessel had arrived at the Sandwich Islands on the 10th of last month, after a tedious voyage of 25 days from the mouth of the Columbia. The Garibaldi is bound for Hongkong, and she sailed for that port a few days subsequent to the writing of the letter. No cargo was discharged at Honolulu, but about 15 passengers were taken.

DEAD CHINAMAN.—On the last trip of the John L. Stephens from this place to San Francisco, a Chinaman, who was almost dead with consumption, took passage. He was sick all the way down and died just as the steamer was entering the Golden Gate.

AT THE LOCKS.—Masonry work on the locks is nearly finished, and the wooden portion of the improvements is following as rapidly as possible. The company are determined to have the canal in complete readiness to allow the passage of boats by the 25th inst.

REGULAR MEETING.—There will be a regular, monthly meeting this evening of the Board of Delegates of the Portland Fire Department. Prominent among the business transacted will be to declare officially the result of the late firemen's election.

NOON DAY PRAYER MEETINGS.—The noon day prayer meetings, held at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A., from 12 to 1 o'clock, are well attended and very interesting. The subject this noon will be, Temperance.

LECTURE.—Mrs. A. J. Duniway will lecture at Oro Fino Theater to-morrow evening on the subject "Polygamy, or a Week at Salt Lake." At the close of the lecture, Mrs. Duniway will recite an original poem.

TO COLUMBIA CITY.—The bark Nancy will be towed down the river this morning by the steamer Rescue, to Columbia City. At that point the remainder of her cargo will be received from river steamers.

FINAL REPORT.—The final report of the Grand Jury in the Circuit Court, will probably be made to day, and that body discharged from further attendance.

LOADING AT ST HELENS.—The brig Perpetua will not come to this port at all. She is now receiving a cargo of lumber for San Francisco, at St Helens.

FEAST.—To morrow, the 8th, the Catholic Church, the world over, will celebrate the Feast of the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary.

SAILED.—The steamer California sailed last evening from this port for Victoria and Northern ports. She took no passengers and a light cargo.

TO SAIL.—The steamship John L. Stephens is announced to sail from this port for San Francisco, next Monday evening at 4 o'clock.

ELECTED.—At the last meeting of the Lumet Guard, Mr J. J. Ryan was elected Secretary, to fill a vacancy existing in that office.

Messrs Beck & Waldman have Men and Boy's Suits of every pattern, of fine material and at low prices. See their notice elsewhere.

SERVICE.—Divine service will be held to morrow at Lees' Chapel at 7 o'clock P. M. Rev Daniel Jones will officiate.

MOTION DAY.—The time in the Circuit Court to day will be devoted exclusively to the hearing and deciding of motions.

B. L. STONE, jeweller, is offering rare bargains at 107 Front street. Do not fail to read his card to-morrow.

AMUSEMENTS.

A grand matinee performance will be given this afternoon at Oro Fino Theater.

Mrs. Coriell's Vaudeville Troupe is now en route for this city from the Sound. This troupe is announced to perform at the new Masonic Hall next Monday evening.

Mrs Chas Coriell's Vaudeville Troupe of truly startling artists, who have been playing for the past month at the Theater Royal, Victoria, to crowded houses, under the patronage of the Governor and elite of that city, will appear in the New Masonic Hall on Monday night. The press of Victoria speak very highly of them.

"The Last of the Wampanoags" was produced last evening at Oro Fino Theater to a good house. The play in all its details was acted up to its proper conception, and won warm and frequent applause. "The Wandering Minstrel," a most rib tickling and mirth provoking farce, concluded the evening's entertainment. A good bill this evening is will be offered the public.

A Concert of classical sacred music, selected from the works of Handel, Rossini, Himmel, Zingarelli, and others, will be given in the Baptist Church, on Friday evening, Dec 13th, by the choir of the Church, Mrs J. A. Brownell, Miss Alice Pease, Mr C. C. Morse, Mr D. McKerchie, Mr. C. H. Newell, assisted by Miss Tuttle and J. B. Pilkington. Prof R. T. Yarndley will preside at the piano. Prof. G. P. Newell, conductor.

Living Advertisements.

A medicine that has done more than all the prescriptions of the pharmacopœia to protect the human system against the deadly ills superinduced by unhealthy surroundings is certainly worthy of universal confidence. It is mainly on account of its extraordinary preventive properties that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is so exceedingly popular in localities subject to the visitation of miasmatic fevers and other diseases produced by cesspools and air. A family that has escaped sickness during a sickly season in consequence of using the Bitters as a safeguard is a living advertisement of the virtues of the preparation. The whole neighborhood realizes the fact. "I could not have believed it," says one, "I scarcely credit all the advertisements, but one must believe what one sees as another." "It is the very thing we need in this unwholesome section of the country," remarks a third. And the result is that the instinct of self defense, the first law of nature, induces three-fourths of that community to obtain a supply of the great vegetable antidote before the next sickly season sets in. In winter, when the system requires extra vigor and elasticity to enable it to battle the effects of damp and cold, the Bitters will be found particularly serviceable. Rheumatism will not be apt to fasten upon muscles and nerves that have been braced up by this excellent invigorant and nervine, nor will the severities of the season, which have such a disastrous effect on the pulmonary organs of the feeble and delicate be likely to exercise the same untoward influence in cases where the stomach and the external surface of the body (which always sympathizes with the digestive organs) have been toned and stimulated by a course of the restorative. The fits of indigestion and irregularities of the bowels which proceed from sudden changes of weather may always be averted by a timely use of the Bitters.

PLANTATION BITTERS!
S. T.—1860—X.
This wonderful vegetable restorative is the sheet-anchor of the feeble and debilitated. As a tonic and cordial for the aged and languid it has no equal among stomachics. As a remedy for the nervous weakness to which women are especially subject, it is superseding every other stimulant. In all climates, tropical, temperate or frigid, it acts as a specific in every species of disorder which undermines the bodily strength and breaks down the animal spirits.

LYON'S KATHAIRON,
For Preserving and Beautifying the Human Hair. To Prevent its Falling Out and Turning Grey.
A well preserved Head of Hair, in a person of middle age, at once bespeaks refinement, elegance, health and beauty. It may truly be called Woman's Crowning Glory, while men are not insensible to its advantages and charms. Few things are more disgusting than thin, frizzly, harsh, untamed Hair, with head and coat covered with Dandruff. Visit a barber and you feel and look like a new man. This is what LYON'S KATHAIRON will do all the time. The charm which lies in well placed Hair, Glossy Curls, Luxuriant Tresses, and a Clean Head, is noticeable and irresistible.
Sold by all Druggists and Country Stores.

MARRIED IN A SNOW STORM.

About the year 1811, memorable in Russian history, there lived upon his estate of Nemaradof, a rich landed proprietor, Gabrilovitch by name, noted for his affability and hospitality His house was always open to his friends and neighbors, who used to congregate there every evening, the older ones to enjoy a game of cards with the host and his wife Petrowna, the younger ones in the hope of winning the favor of Marie a beautiful girl of 17, the only daughter and heiress of Gabrilovitch.

Marie read French novels, which naturally rendered her very sentimental and romantic Under these circumstances love was not long in coming. The object of her affections was a Russian cadet with scarcely a penny in his pocket, who resided in the neighborhood, and was then at home on a leave of absence. As a matter of course he returned her love with equal ardor. Marie's parents had strictly forbidden her thinking of such a union and they treated the lover, wherever they met him with just as much friendliness as they would have shown to an ex-collector of taxes. The amourous pair meantime carried on correspondence, and met clandestinely beneath the shade of the pine grove, or behind the old chapel. As will readily be supposed, they here vowed eternal fidelity to each other, complained of the severity of fate, and devised beautiful plans for the future. After some time they naturally came to think that should their parents persist in opposing the union, it might in the end be consummated secretly, and without their consent. The young gentleman was the first to propose this, and the young lady soon saw the expediency of it.

The approach of winter put an end to these stolen interviews; but their letters increased in frequency and warmth. In each of them Vladimir Nicholovitch conjured his beloved to leave her paternal roof, and consent to a clandestine marriage. "We will disappear for a short time," he wrote, "come back and cast ourselves at the feet of our parents, who touched by such constancy, will exclaim, 'come to our arms, dear children!'" Marie was long irresolute; at length it was agreed, however, that she should not appear at supper on a day appointed, but should retire to her room under the pretext of indisposition. Her maid had been let into the secret. Both were to escape by a back-door, in the front of which they would find a sleigh ready to convey them a distance of five wersts to the chapel of Jadrino, where Vladimere and the priest would await them.

Having made her preparations, and written a long apologetical letter to her parents, Marie retired betimes to her room. She had been complaining all day of a headache, and this was certainly no mere pretext, for the nervous excitement had in truth indisposed her. Her father and mother nursed her tenderly, asking her again and again: "How do you feel now, Marie? Are you no better? This loving solicitude cut the girl to the heart, and with the approach of the evening her excitement increased. At supper she ate nothing, but rose betimes and bade her parents good-night. The latter blessed and kissed her, as was their wont, while Marie could scarcely repress her sobs. Having reached her room, she threw herself into a chair and wept aloud. Her maid finally succeeded in comforting and cheering her up.

Later in the evening a snow-strom arose The wind howled about the house causing the windows to rattle. The inmates had hardly gone to rest, when the young girl, wrapping herself in her clothes and furs, and followed by the servant with a portmanteau, left the paternal roof. A sleigh drawn by three horses received them, and away they went at a furious speed.

Vladimir had also been active throughout the day. In the morning he had called upon the minister at Jadrino to arrange for the ceremony, and then he went to look up the required witnesses. The first acquaintance to whom he applied was an officer on half-pay, who expressed himself quite ready to serve him. Such an adventure, he said, carried him back to the days of his own youth. He determined Vladimir to remain with him, taking upon himself to procure the other two witnesses. There accordingly appeared at dinner Surveyor Schmidt, with his spurs and mustache and Ispravnik's son, a lad of 17, who had but just enlisted with the Uhlans. Both promised Vladimir their assistance, and after a cordial embrace the happy lover parted from his three friends to complete his preparations at home.

Having dispatched a trusty servant with a sleigh for Marie, he got into a one-horse sleigh himself, and took the road leading to Jadrino. Scarcely had he set off when the storm burst forth with violence, and soon every trace of the way was gone. The entire horizon was covered with thick, yellow clouds, discharging not flakes, but masses of snow; at last it became impossible to distinguish between earth and sky. In vain Vladimir beat about for the way; his horse went on at random, now leaping over banks of snow, now sinking into ditches, and threatening every moment to overturn the sleigh. The insupportable thought of having lost the road had become a certainty. The forest of Jadrino was nowhere to be discovered, and after two hours the jaded animal seemed ready to drop to the ground. At length a dark line became visible in the distance. Vladimir urged his horse forward and reached the skirt of a forest. He now hoped to reach his destination soon, as it was easier to pursue his way in the forest, into which the snow had not yet penetrated. Vladimir took fresh courage, however there were no signs of Jadrino. By degrees the storm abated and the moon shone brightly. He finally got to the opposite side of the forest. Still no Jadrino; but a group of four or five houses met his view. His knock at the door of the nearest was answered by an old man.

"What do you want?" he said.

"Where lies Jadrino?"

"About ten wersts distant."

At this reply Vladimir felt as if his sentence of death was being announced to him.

"Can you procure me a horse to take me thither?" he asked.

"We have no horses."

"Or at least a guide. I will pay any price."

"Very well. My son can accompany the gentleman."

After a little while, which seemed an eternity to Vladimir, a young fellow made his appearance, holding a thick staff in his hand, and they took their way across the snow-covered plain.

"What o'clock is it?" asked Vladimer.

"It is already past midnight."

And in very truth the sun began to gild the east when they finally arrived at Jadrino. The church door was locked. Vladimir paid and dismissed his guide, and then instantly hastened to the minister's dwelling. What he learned there will appear in the sequel.

At Nemaradof the night had passed quietly. In the morning the master of the house and his wife arose as usual and proceeded to the dining-room, Gabriel Gabrilovitch in his woolen jacket and nightcap, Petrowna in her morning gown. After they had breakfasted, Gabriel sent one of the girls to see how Marie was. She returned with the message that her young mistress had had a sleepless night, but that she was feeling better now, and would come down presently. Marie soon after entered the room, looking exceedingly pale, yet without the least perceptible agitation.

"How do you feel this morning, love?" inquired her father.

"Better" was the answer.

The day passed on as usual, but instead of the looked for improvement, a serious change for the worse took place in Marie's condition. The family physician was summoned from the nearest town who found her in a state of most violent fever. For fourteen days she lay at the point of death.

Nothing transpired of the nocturnal flight for the maid took good care to keep silence on her own account, and the others who knew of it never betrayed themselves with a syllable, even when they were under the influence of brandy so greatly did they dread Gabriel's anger.

Marie, however, spoke so incessantly of Vladimir when delirous, that her mother could not remain in doubt as to the cause of to the cause of her illness. Having advised with a few friends, her parents resolved to let Marie marry the young soldier, seeing that one cannot escape one's fate, and besides that, riches do not always lead to happiness.

The patient recovered. During her illness Vladimir had not once shown his face in the house, and it was resolved to apprise him of his unexpected good-fortune. But to the astonishment of the proud proprietor of Nemaradof the cadet declared that he should never cross the threshold of his house, begging them at the same time to forget utterly so wretched a creature as he, to whom death alone would give repose

A few days afterward they learned that Vladimir had again returned to the army It was in the year 1812 No one uttered his name in Marie's presence, and she herself never made mention of him in any way Two or three months elapsed, when one day she found his name among the list of the officers who had distinguished themselves at the battle of Borodino and been mortally wounded. She fainted away and had a relapse, from which she recovered but slowly

Not long after her father died, bequeathing his whole property to her. But riches did not comfort her, she wept with her mother, and promised never to leave her. They sold Nemaradof and removed to another estate Suitors thronged around the wealthy and amiable heiress, but one of them received the slightest encouragement from her Often did her mother press her to choose a husband—she would merely shake her head in silence, Vladimir was no more, he died at Moscow on the evening of the entrance of the French Marie seemed to hold his memory sacred, she carefully preserved the books they had read together, his sketches, the letters he had written to her—in brief, everything that could serve to keep alive the remembrance of the ill-fated youth.

About this time, the war, fought with such glory to the allies, of whom Russia was also one, came to an end. The victorious regiments returned home, and large crowds of people flocked together to greet them. Officers who had gone forth as beardless youths came back with the grave faces of warriors, their gallant breasts covered with badges.

A lieutenant of hussars, Wurmin by name, with an interestingly pale face, and decorated with the cross of St. George, having obtained leave of absence for several months, took up his residence upon his estate, which adjoined Marie's present abode. The young girl received him with far more favor than she had hitherto shown to any of her visitors. They resembled each other in many respects, both were handsome, intelligent, taciturn and reserved. There was something mysterious about Wurmin, which aroused the curiosity and interest of Marie. His affection for her was soon unmistakable; he showed her every conceivable attention; but why did he not speak of love, though his dark, ardent eyes would rest upon her's half dreamily, half with an expression that seemed to announce an early and positive declaration? Already the neighbors spoke of their marriage as a settled matter already and Mother Petrowna was more than happy at the thought of her daughter's finding a worthy husband at last.

One morning when the latter was sitting in the parlor, Wurmin entered and asked for Marie.

"She is in the garden," answered her mother.

"You will find my daughter there if you would like to see her."

The young officer hastily walked out into the garden.

Petrowna crossed herself, murmuring "God be praised! To-day I trust his visit will have some result."

Wurmin found his beloved, clad in white, sitting under a tree by the pond, a book upon her lap, like a heroine of romance. The usual salutations over, Wurmin who was strangely agitated, told her how he had long yearned to pour out his heart before her, and begged her to listen to him a few moments. She closed her book, and nodded in token of assent.

"I love you," said Wurmin, "I love you passionately."

Marie cast down her eyes.

"I have been imprudent enough to see you, to hear you—daily. It is now too late to escape my fate. The thought of your lovely face, of your sweet voice, will henceforth constitute the joy and anguish of my existence. But I have a duty to perform toward you; I must reveal to you a secret, which has placed an insurmountable barrier between us."

"That barrier," murmured Marie, "existed always—I could never have become yours."

"I know" replied Wurmin, in a suppresed voice "that you have loved before; but death—three long years of mourning—dearest Marie, do not deprive me of my last comfort of the blissful thought that you might become mine if—"

"Cease I conjure you! You rend my heart!"

"Yes, you will grant me the comfort of knowing that you would have become mine; but, most wretched man that I am—I am already married!"

Marie gazed up at him with a look of astonishment.

"Yes married for four years," continued the lieutenant, "and I do not know either who my wife is, where she is, or whether I shall ever meet her."

"Explain yourself more clearly," said the girl.

"I love you, Marie, and I will confide in you. You shall know all, and you will not judge too severely an act of youthful levity. It was in the year 1812. I happened to be on my way to Wilna, with the intention of joining my regiment. Late in the evening I reached a station, and had already ordered that horses should be put to again, when a fierce snow storm suddenly arose My landlord and the postilion urgently advised me to postpone my departure; but I was determined to go in spite of the rough weather. The postilion had got it into his head that, by crossing a small river, the banks of which were perfectly well known to him, he should find a shorter route. He missed the right crossing, however, and got into a region to which he was an entire stranger. The storm continued to rage; at length we descried a light in the distance. We made for it, and stopped before a church, from the brightly illuminated windows of which the light shone. The door was open, three sleighs were in front of it, and I saw several persons in the vestibule. One of them called to me: 'This way! this way!' I got out and walked toward the vestibule.

"The person who had called advanced toward me.

"'Great Heavens!' he said, how late you come! Your intended has fainted, and we were on the very point of driving home again '

"Half bewildered and half amused, I resolved to let the adventure take its course. And, indeed, I had little time for reflection. My friends tugged me into the interior of the church, which was poorly lighted by two or three lamps. A female was sitting upon a bench in the shadow, while another stood beside her and chafed her temples.

"'At last!' cried the latter, 'God be praised that you have come! My poor mistress liked to have died.'

"An aged priest emerged from behind the altar, and asked. 'Can we begin?'

"'Begin, reverend father!' I cried, unadvisedly

"They assisted the half unconscious girl to rise; she appeared to be very pretty. In a fit of unpardonable, and now quite incomprehensible, levity, I readily stepped with her to the altar. Her maid and the three gentlemen present were so busy with her as scarcely to throw a look at me. Besides, the light in this part of the church was dim, and my head was muffled in the hood of my cloak.

"In a few minutes the nuptial ceremony was over, and the priest, according to custom, desired the newly-married pair to embrace.

"My young wife turned her pale, charming little face toward me, and was about to rest her head upon my shoulder with a sweet smile, when suddenly she stared at me as if turned into stone, tottered, and with the cry of 'It is not he!' fell to the floor.

"All the furies of hell lashed me out of church Before any one could think of staying me I had jumped into my sleigh, seized the reins and was soon beyond the reach of pursuit."

The lieutenant was silent. Marie also gazed in silence to the ground.

"And have you never discovered what became of the poor girl?" she finally asked

"Never. I know neither the name of the village where I was married, nor do I recollect where I stopped. At the time, my culpably frivolous prank seemed to me a matter of so little moment, that as soon as there was no longer any pursuit to fear, I went to sleep in the sleigh, and did not awake till we arrived at another station. The servant whom I had with me was killed in battle, all my efforts to find out the postilion who drove us proved unavailing, and so every clew seems indeed lost by which I might again find the scene of that folly, for which I have now to suffer so heavily."

Marie turned her pale face toward him and took both his hands The lieutenant gazed thunder-struck into her eyes; a dim foreboding awoke in his breast, a veil suddenly dropped from his eyes.

"Marie! God of heaven, how can I have been so blind! Marie, was it indeed you?"

"I am your wife!" was the only answer of the girl, who sunk fainting into his arms.—From the Russian of Alexander Pushkin

Harper's Magazine on Woman Suffrage.

George William Curtis evidently is in earnest on the woman suffrage question Quite in keeping with his recent lecture in New York is this from his Easy Chair in Harper's

If the principle that there shall be no taxation without representation be correct, there is not, and there never has been, a sound argument for the disfranchisement of women since they have been property holders A woman might own all the real estate upon the chief street of the village, yet she cannot vote for road overseer Plainly, if her sex incapacitates her, being mature and intelligent, for controlling her property, it should certainly incapacitate her from owning it. The law that authorized her to earn, hold, and devise property lifted the lid from the ballot-box. And all that the Massachusetts Convention has done is to say, "Certainly it did."

The Convention said that it was the opinion of the party; but that, as we said, we shall now see. We have nothing to do with the party, but this is a question of all parties, especially if, as the scoffers say, every wife will vote with her husband. Of course they always agree in religious matters, so it may be supposed that they will in political. Indeed, there are never any differences between wives and husbands. The husband has only to take snuff, and the wife sneezes. The Spratt legend is a foul libel upon matrimonial tastes. But if every wife is sure to vote with her husband, shall she therefore not have the right to vote? Most youths of twenty-one vote with their fathers—shall they also be excluded from the polls? Shall the rule be extended, and anybody who votes as anybody else votes be disfranchised for that reason? Or shall only those be permitted to vote who can give a sound and satisfactory reason for their ballot? If a wife may not vote because love for her husband would lead her to duplicate his vote, then, of course, all men whose votes are influenced by personal regard and respect for some one else must be set aside. Indeed, it is chiefly when men begin to argue the question of suffrage for women that a grave doubt of their own competency to vote arises.

But if wives are to be excluded because they will vote with their husbands, upon what ground shall we disfranchise those who have no husbands to vote with? Shall we deprive them of the ballot as a punishment for not having husbands to deprive them of it? The same excellent argument would apply to their property; and we ought to confiscate the earnings of spinsters because they have no husbands to manage their money for them. Indeed, the arguments all tend to prove that women should be in a perpetual prostration of gratitude that men suffer them to exist upon any terms whatever.

Certainly no really great movement ever proceeded so steadily and swiftly in the face of curious difficulties as that of woman suffrage in this country. It has had the most whimsical and often absurd and repulsive advocacy. It has often seemed to be the very politics of the moon. Extravagance and folly have been so hopelessly combined in its behalf that many of its truest friends have wondered that it was not pushed from decent and candid consideration. But such friends cannot too constantly remember that it is the history of every movement which is an appeal to pure reason.

There are no guns or clubs behind the demand for this extension of the suffrage. It is conducted wholly within the domain of intelligence. And if riddled with ridicule, let any sceptic recall the beginnings of Methodism. Read Sydney Smith, and wonder how an intelligent and liberal man could deride some of the noblest and best men that ever lived. The history of the movement for the extension of suffrage to women, like all the other great movements in this country, shows to every youth that he who is hospitable to a liberty which is ridiculed entertains angels unawares. It is safe to heed the counsel of Condorcet, "Do not choose a man who has ever taken side against the liberty of any portion of mankind."—

A SINGULAR DISPUTE.—The New York Tribune of the 20th ult. has the following:

Soon after the Chicago fire the Legislature of the District of Columbia appropriated $100,000 for the relief of the sufferers, and a committee of citizens was appointed to disburse the money. Requisitions from the Mayor of Chicago, from time to time, were honored to the amount of about $75,000, but the remaining $25,000, more or less, was never called for, and remained in the hands of the relief committee. Within a day or two Charles G Hammond of Chicago, the treasurer in that city, of the relief fund, has arrived here and demands the remainder of Washington's subscription for the purpose of turning it over to Boston It is charged that the money has already been used on the public works here, and cannot be forthcoming. At any rate, payment to Col Hammond has been refused. Whether he has the Mayor's authority or not is not stated. Some of the members of the District Committee say that the remainder of the original amount is invested in bonds in New York, and will be paid on adequate authority. As Chicago does not need it, and has so announced to the country, the Committee profess to be in doubt as to their authority in the matter. They say, too, if the money is to go to Boston, it should go as coming from Washington and not from Chicago.

Tonnage to Arrive.

We predicted some time since that the high tariff for freights would attract the attention of ship owners toward our coast and the following list of vessels coming this way, verifies our assertion. The Commercial Reporter has gathered the names of the following vessels to arrive here between this date and the first of June 1873

Br ship Victoria Cross, Crowley, from Middlesburgh, with R. R iron for O. & C R R, 120 days out Consigned to Hewett, Wilson & Co.

Home Produce Market.

WHEAT.—We are still unable to quote the market as settled though but one figure $1 45 per cental has ruled here during the past week Advices from the interior indicate rather more activity but only where buyers have come into a peculiar competition has there been any perceptible advance upon the figures heretofore given. The demand here is rather better than it was a few days ago, but from what we can learn our dealers here have not yet full confidence in the permanancy of the reported rise in San Francisco.

OATS—We heard of but few transactions to-day, and appearances indicate a turn in the market in San Francisco, though our quotations of yesterday remain unchanged.

FLOUR—The demand continues fair, and our figures of $5 for standard brands of extra, $4@4 50 choice country, and $3 75@4 for outside and superfine are still retained.

Other products are unchanged from yesterday's quotations

Third st., bet. Hill and Market streets,

SECOND DOOR FROM CORNER OF MARKET.

Dr. Resser having located himself in Portland, permanently, makes both

Liver & Lung Diseases

A SPECIALTY,

And is now prepared to treat patients for those diseases

Not being fortunate enough to have treated a great many eminent and distinguished persons, whose names are most generally emblazoned to the world by advertising physicians, but at the same time I can produce numerous and voluntary testimonials from those I have treated for the above diseases!

It is well enough known throughout California that I am the possessor of a secret to prepare a medicine, purely vegetable, for the above diseases, and have made some of the

Most Remarkable Cures on Record,

And in cases which were entirely despaired of by other physicians.

A Card to the Public.

Having learned that Dr H RESSER has located himself in Portland, I deem it my duty to the public, and more particularly those persons who may be afflicted as I have been. After leaving Portland, a few months ago, I became afflicted with Epileptic Fits, and after having tried and consulted several distinguished physicians, without any benefit whatever, I was advised to call on Dr. H. RESSER, who happened to be visiting Virginia City at the time on professional business. I lost no time in placing myself under the care of DR RESSER, and am now restored to perfect health. I can most highly recommend DR. RESSER to those who may be equally afflicted. FREDERICK LORNER.

Other Testimony.

MR. EDITOR I saw in your last issue of the Press a card written by Mr Robinson, and I deem it my duty also to make a similar statement for the benefit of those who are troubled with disease of the lungs. Three years ago I commenced under the treatment of some of the most skillful physicians of the Atlantic States, who pronounced my case Bronchial Consumption. After treating with them about two years, with but little benefit, I was advised a change of climate, which I made, and came to Santa Barbara about a year ago, with the hopes of a speedy recovery, but could not see that the change had been what I anticipated, until a month since I commenced under the treatment of Dr. RESSER, and have improved in health very much in that time, and am confident in a short time I will be restored to perfect health under his treatment. I cordially recommend DR. RESSER to the public MRS M L REYNOLDS

Santa Barbara, June 21, 1871.

Card.

ST CHARLES HOTEL,
SANTA BARBARA, Cal. May 25, 1871.

I consider it my duty to the public to make the following statement, hoping that some unfortunate invalid may be benefitted by it Having been sick for some time with lung disease (or consumption) I applied to many physicians in San Francisco and other places, under whose treatment I found no relief A short time since I met Dr Resser here in Santa Barbara, and knowing of some of the wonderful cures he has made in different parts of the State, I put myself under his treatment, and commenced to improve immediately I can warmly recommend Dr. Resser to all who are afflicted with this dreadful disease, as he makes the lung and liver disease his specialty

ELIJAH ROBINSON,

Card.

It is well known here that I have been under the doctors' care for the last twelve months in San Francisco and here, but could receive no benefit from any one. When Dr Resser arrived here, a short time ago, I put myself under his treatment, and commenced to improve immediately, and I am confident that in a short time I shall be restored to my health again I can highly recommend Dr Resser to the public

COLEMAN O'DONNEL.

Virginia City, Oct 15, 1872

Card.

To remove all doubt from the public mind in relation to a question which has created some dispute in San Jose, I feel it my duty to make the following public statement of facts. It is well known that my wife was very low with consumption—so low, in fact that I had given up all hope of her recovery I called on Dr H RESSER, who makes consumption his specialty and in two weeks time my wife's health had so improved that she was able to walk out, and for the last three weeks has been on a visit to San Francisco, and is growing stronger every day I can recommend DR RESSER to all who are afflicted with diseases of the lungs MOSES CHADBOURNE,

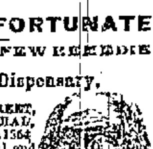
TO THE UNFORTUNATE.

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,



623 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco. Established in 1854 for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhea, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

DR. GIBBON has the pleasure of announcing that he has returned from visiting the principal Hospitals of Europe, and has resumed practice at his Dispensary, 623 Kearny street, corner of Commercial, San Francisco, where his old patients and those requiring his services may find him.

The Doctor has spared neither time nor money in seeking out new remedies, and has returned with increased facilities for the alleviation of human suffering

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system! Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible, life-destroying maladies—see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late Send them immediately to DR GIBBON, a physician who has made private diseases his especial study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate case, without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practiced by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallow countenance dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers a dislike to form new acquaintances, disposition to shun society, loss of memory hectic flushes, pimples and [illegible] eruptions about the faces, furred tongue, fetid breath, coughs, consumption night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained, should apply immediately, either in person or by letter and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr G will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks.

MARRIED MEN.

Or those who contemplate marriage, who are suffering under any of these fearful maladies, should not forget the sacred responsibility resting upon them nor delay to obtain immediate relief.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

CURED AT HOME.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Dr. Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded, free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions. By inclosing Ten Dollars coin, in registered letter through the Postoffice, or through Wells, Fargo & Co., a package of medicine will be forwarded to any part of the Union

All communications strictly confidential.

Caution to the Unfortunate.

Beware of the San Francisco quacks and pretenders who, with bogus sworn-to certificates, dupe the unwary one of the self styled doctors, whose names are to be found in the daily and weekly newspapers of San Francisco and other places, are tradesmen and became too lazy too work at their trades. Some are tinsmiths, shoemakers, newspaper carriers, intelligence office keepers, etc. The only way to avoid imposition is to make inquiry—it will cost you nothing, and may save you many regrets; for, as advertising physicians in eight cases out of ten are bogus, there is no safety in trusting any of them until you know who and what they are. Dr. Gibbon does not deceive people by exhibiting bogus titles, certificates, pretended patients' letters, etc. Dr. Gibbon will satisfy persons who may call at his offices of his ability to treat diseases that he proposes to cure.

Address DR. J F. GIBBON, 623 Kearney street, corner Commercial, San Francisco, Post Office Box 1,957

REMEMBER TO PUT BOX 1,957 ON THE LETTER. Consultations FREE.

Correspondents will please inform DR GIBBON that they read his advertisement in the Daily Oregonian D6d4wt

MARRIED IN A SNOW STORM.

About the year 1811, memorable in Russian history, there lived upon his estate of Nemaradof, a rich landed proprietor, Gabrilovitch by name, noted for his affability and hospitality His house was always open to his friends and neighbors, who used to congregate there every evening the older ones to enjoy a game of cards with the host and his wife Petrowna the younger ones in the hope of winning the favor of Marie, a beautiful girl of 17, the only daughter and heiress of Gabrilovitch

Marie read French novels, which naturally rendered her very sentimental and romantic. Under these circumstances love was not long in coming. The object of her affections was a Russian cadet with scarcely a penny in his pocket, who resided in the neighborhood, and was then at home on a leave of absence As a matter of course he returned her love with equal ardor Marie's parents had strictly forbidden her thinking of such a union and they treated the lover, wherever they met him with just as much friendliness as they would have shown to an ex collector of taxes The amourous pair meantime carried on correspondence, and met clandestinely beneath the shade of the pine grove, or behind the old chapel. As will readily be supposed they here vowed eternal fidelity to each other complained of the severity of fate, and devised beautiful plans for the future. After some time they naturally came to think that should their parents persist in opposing the union, it might in the end be consummated secretly, and without their consent. The young gentleman was the first to propose this, and the young lady soon saw the expediency of it.

The approach of winter put an end to these stolen interviews, but their letters increased in frequency and warmth. In each of them Vladimir Nicholovitch conjured his beloved to leave her paternal roof, and consent to a clandestine marriage "We will disappear for a short time," he wrote, "come back and cast ourselves at the feet of our parents, who touched by such constancy, will exclaim, 'come to our arms, dear children!'" Marie was long irresolute; at length it was agreed, however, that she should not appear at supper on a day appointed, but should retire to her room under the pretext of indisposition. Her maid had been let into the secret. Both were to escape by a back-door, in the front of which they would find a sleigh ready to convey them a distance of five wersts to the chapel of Jadrino, where Vladimero and the priest would await them.

Having made her preparations, and written a long apologetical letter to her parents, Marie retired betimes to her room. She had been complaining all day of a headache, and this was certainly no mere pretext, for the nervous excitement had in truth indisposed her. Her father and mother nursed her tenderly, asking her again and again: "How do you feel now, Marie? Are you no better? This loving solicitude cut the girl to the heart, and with the approach of the evening her excitement increased. At supper she ate nothing, but rose betimes and bade her parents good-night. The latter blessed and kissed her, as was their wont, while Marie could scarcely repress her sobs. Having reached her room, she threw herself into a chair and wept aloud. Her maid finally succeeded in comforting and cheering her up.

Later in the evening a snow-strom arose The wind howled about the house causing the windows to rattle. The inmates had hardly gone to rest, when the young girl, wrapping herself in her clothes and furs, and followed by the servant with a portmanteau, left the paternal roof. A sleigh drawn by three horses received them, and away they went at a furious speed.

Vladimir had also been active throughout the day. In the morning he had called upon the minister at Jadrino to arrange for the ceremony, and then he went to look up the required witnesses. The first acquaintance to whom he applied was an officer on half-pay, who expressed himself quite ready to serve him. Such an adventure, he said, carried him back to the days of his own youth. He determined Vladimir to remain with him, taking upon himself to procure the other two witnesses. There accordingly appeared at dinner Surveyor Schmidt, with his spurs and mustache and Ispravnik's son, a lad of 17, who had but just enlisted with the Uhlans. Both promised Vladimir their assistance, and after a cordial embrace the happy lover parted from his three friends to complete his preparations at home.

Having dispatched a trusty servant with a sleigh for Marie, he got into a one-horse sleigh himself, and took the road leading to Jadrino. Scarcely had he set off when the storm burst forth with violence, and soon every trace of the way was gone. The entire horizon was covered with thick, yellow clouds, discharging not flakes, but masses of snow; at last it became impossible to distinguish between earth and sky. In vain Vladimir beat about for the way; his horse went on at random, now leaping over banks of snow, now sinking into ditches, and threatening every moment to overturn the sleigh. The insupportable thought of having lost the road had become a certainty. The forest of Jadrino was nowhere to be discovered, and after two hours the jaded animal seemed ready to drop to the ground. At length a dark line became visible in the distance. Vladimir urged his horse forward and reached the skirt of a forest He now hoped to reach his destination soon, as it was easier to pursue his way in the forest, into which the snow had not yet penetrated. Vladimir took fresh courage, however there were no signs of Jadrino. By degrees the storm abated and the moon shone brightly. He finally got to the opposite side of the forest. Still no Jadrino; but a group of four or five houses met his view. His knock at the door of the nearest was answered by an old man.

"What do you want?" he said.

"Where lies Jadrino?"

"About ten wersts distant."

At this reply Vladimir felt as if his sentence of death was being announced to him.

"Can you procure me a horse to take me thither?" he asked.

"We have no horses."

"Or at least a guide. I will pay any price."

"Very well. My son can accompany the gentleman."

After a little while, which seemed an eternity to Vladimir, a young fellow made his appearance, holding a thick staff in his hand, and they took their way across the snow-covered plain.

"What o'clock is it?" asked Vladimer.

"It is already past midnight "

And in very truth the sun began to gild the east when they finally arrived at Jadrino The church door was locked. Vladimir paid and dismissed his guide, and then instantly hastened to the minister's dwelling. What he learned there will appear in the sequel.

At Nameradof the night had passed quietly. In the morning the master of the house and his wife arose as usual and proceeded to the dining-room, Gabriel Gabrilovitch in his woolen jacket and nightcap, Petrowna in her morning gown. After they had breakfasted, Gabriel sent one of the girls to see how Marie was. She returned with the message that her young mistress had had a sleepless night, but that she was feeling better now, and would come down presently. Marie soon after entered the room, looking exceedingly pale, yet without the least perceptible agitation.

"How do you feel this morning, love?" inquired her father.

"Better" was the answer.

The day passed on as usual, but instead of the looked for improvement, a serious change for the worse took place in Marie's condition The family physician was summoned from the nearest town who found her in a state of most violent fever. For fourteen days she lay at the point of death.

Nothing transpired of the nocturnal flight for the maid took good care to keep silence on her own account, and the others who knew of it never betrayed themselves with a syllable, even when they were under the influence of brandy so greatly did they dread Gabriel's anger.

Marie, however, spoke so incessantly of Vladimir when delirous, that her mother could not remain in doubt as to the cause of to the cause of her illness. Having advised with a few friends, her parents resolved to let Marie marry the young soldier, seeing that one cannot escape one's fate, and besides that, riches do not always lead to happiness

The patient recovered. During her illness Vladimir had not once shown his face in the house, and it was resolved to apprise him of his unexpected good-fortune. But to the astonishment of the proud proprietor of Nemaradof the cadet declared that he should never cross the threshold of his house, begging them at the same time to forget utterly so wretched a creature as he, to whom death alone would give repose

A few days afterward they learned that Vladimir had again returned to the army. It was in the year 1812 No one uttered his name in Marie's presence, and she herself never made mention of him in any way Two or three months elapsed, when one day she found his name among the list of the officers who had distinguished themselves at the battle of Borodino and been mortally wounded She fainted away and had a relapse, from which she recovered but slowly.

Not long after her father died, bequeathing his whole property to her But riches did not comfort her she wept with her mother, and promised never to leave her They sold Nemaradof and removed to another estate Suitors thronged around the wealthy and amiable heiress but one of them received the slightest encouragement from her Often did her mother press her to choose a husband—she would merely shake her head in silence, Vladimir was no more, he died at Moscow on the evening of the entrance of the French Marie seemed to hold his memory sacred, she carefully preserved the books they had read together, his sketches, the letters he had written to her—in brief, everything that could serve to keep alive the remembrance of the ill-fated youth.

About this time, the war, fought with such glory to the allies, of whom Russia was also one, came to an end. The victorious regiments returned home, and large crowds of people flocked together to greet them. Officers who had gone forth as beardless youths came back with the grave faces of warriors, their gallant breasts covered with badges.

A lieutenant of hussars, Wurmin by name, with an interestingly pale face, and decorated with the cross of St. George, having obtained leave of absence for several months, took up his residence upon his estate, which adjoined Marie's present abode. The young girl received him with far more favor than she had hitherto shown to any of her visitors. They resembled each other in many respects, both were handsome, intelligent, taciturn and reserved There was something mysterious about Wurmin, which aroused the curiosity and interest of Marie. His affection for her was soon unmistakable, he showed her every conceivable attention, but why did he not speak of love, though his dark, ardent eyes would rest upon her's half-dreamily, half with an expression that seemed to announce an early and positive declaration? Already the neighbors spoke of their marriage as a settled matter already and Mother Petrowna was more than happy at the thought of her daughter's finding a worthy husband at last

One morning when the latter was sitting in the parlor, Wurmin entered and asked for Marie.

"She is in the garden," answered her mother

"You will find my daughter there if you would like to see her."

The young officer hastily walked out into the garden.

Petrowna crossed herself, murmuring "God be praised! To-day I trust his visit will have some result."

Wurmin found his beloved, clad in white, sitting under a tree by the pond, a book upon her lap, like a heroine of romance The usual salutations over, Wurmin who was strangely agitated, told her how he had long yearned to pour out his heart before her, and begged her to listen to him a few moments. She closed her book, and nodded in token of assent.

"I love you," said Wurmin, "I love you passionately "

Marie cast down her eyes

"I have been imprudent enough to see you, to hear you—daily It is now too late to escape my fate The thought of your lovely face, of your sweet voice, will henceforth constitute the joy and anguish of my existence. But I have a duty to perform toward you; I must reveal to you a secret, which has placed an insurmountable barrier between us."

"That barrier," murmured Marie, "existed always—I could never have become yours."

"I know" replied Wurmin, in a suppressed voice "that you have loved before, but death—three long years of mourning—dearest Marie, do not deprive me of my last comfort of the blissful thought that you might become mine if—"

"Cease I conjure you! You rend my heart!"

"Yes, you will grant me the comfort of knowing that you would have become mine, but, most wretched man that I am—I am already married!"

Marie gazed up at him with a look of astonishment.

"Yes married for four years," continued the lieutenant, "and I do not know either who my wife is, where she is, or whether I shall ever meet her "

"Explain yourself more clearly," said the girl.

"I love you, Marie, and I will confide in you You shall know all, and you will not judge too severely an act of youthful levity. It was in the year 1812 I happened to be on my way to Wilna, with the intention of joining my regiment. Late in the evening I reached a station, and had already ordered that horses should be put to again, when a fierce snow storm suddenly arose My landlord and the postilion urgently advised me to postpone my departure, but I was determined to go in spite of the rough weather The postilion had got it into his head that, by crossing a small river, the banks of which were perfectly well known to him, he should find a shorter route. He missed the right crossing, however, and got into a region to which he was an entire stranger The storm continued to rage, at length we descried a light in the distance We made for it, and stopped before a church, from the brightly illuminated windows of which the light shone. The door was open, three sleighs were in front of it, and I saw several persons in the vestibule. One of them called to me 'This way! this way!' I got out and walked toward the vestibule.

"The person who had called advanced toward me.

"'Great Heavens!' he said, how late you come! Your intended has fainted, and we were on the very point of driving home again

"Half bewildered and half amused, I resolved to let the adventure take its course. And, indeed, I had little time for reflection My friends tugged me into the interior of the church, which was poorly lighted by two or three lamps. A female was sitting upon a bench in the shadow, while another stood beside her and chafed her temples

"'At last!' cried the latter, 'God be praised that you have come! My poor mistress liked to have died.'

"An aged priest emerged from behind the altar, and asked . 'Can we begin?

"'Begin, reverend father!' I cried, unadvisedly

"They assisted the half unconscious girl to rise, she appeared to be very pretty In a fit of unpardonable, and now quite incomprehensible, levity, I readily stepped with her to the altar. Her maid and the three gentlemen present were so busy with her as scarcely to throw a look at me. Besides, the light in this part of the church was dim, and my head was muffled in the hood of my cloak

"In a few minutes the nuptial ceremony was over, and the priest, according to custom, desired the newly married pair to embrace.

"My young wife turned her pale, charming little face toward me, and was about to rest her head upon my shoulder with a sweet smile, when suddenly she stared at me as if turned into stone, tottered, and with the cry of "It is not he"' fell to the floor.

"All the furies of hell lashed me out of church Before any one could think of staying me I had jumped into my sleigh, seized the reins and was soon beyond the reach of pursuit "

The lieutenant was silent Marie also gazed in silence to the ground

"And have you never discovered what became of the poor girl? she finally asked

"Never. I know neither the name of the village where I was married, nor do I recollect where I stopped At the time, my culpably frivolous prank seemed to me a matter of so little moment, that as soon as there was no longer any pursuit to fear, I went to sleep in the sleigh, and did not awake till we arrived at another station. The servant whom I had with me was killed in battle, all my efforts to find out the postilion who drove us proved unavailing, and so every clew seems indeed lost by which I might again find the scene of that folly, for which I have now to suffer so heavily.'

Marie turned her pale face toward him and took both his hands The lieutenant gazed thunder-struck into her eyes, a dim foreboding awoke in his breast, a veil suddenly dropped from his eyes

"Marie God of heaven, how can I have been so blind! Marie, was it indeed you?"

'I am your wife!' was the only answer of the girl, who sank fainting into his arms—From the Russian of Alexander Pushkin

Harper's Magazine on Woman Suffrage

George William Curtis evidently is in earnest on the woman suffrage question Quite in keeping with his recent lecture in New York is this from his Easy Chair in Harper's.

If the principle that there shall be no taxation without representation be correct, there is not, and there never has been, a sound argument for the disfranchisement of women since they have been property holders A woman might own all the real estate upon the chief street of the village, yet she cannot vote for road overseer Plainly, if her sex incapacitates her, being mature and intelligent, for controlling her property, it should certainly incapacitate her from owning it The law that authorized her to earn, hold, and devise property lifted the lid from the ballot box. And all that the Massachusetts Convention has done is to say, "Certainly it did."

The Convention said that it was the opinion of the party, but that, as we said, we shall now see We have nothing to do with the party, but this is a question of all parties, especially if, as the scoffers say, every wife will vote with her husband. Of course they always agree in religious matters, so it may be supposed that they will in political. Indeed, there are never any differences between wives and husbands The husband has only to take snuff, and the wife sneezes. The Spratt legend is a foul libel upon matrimonial tastes But if every wife is sure to vote with her husband, shall she therefore not have the right to vote? Most youths of twenty-one vote with their fathers—shall they also be excluded from the polls? Shall the rule be extended, and anybody who votes as anybody else votes be disfranchised for that reason? Or shall only those be permitted to vote who can give a sound and satisfactory reason for their ballot? If a wife may not vote because love for her husband would lead her to duplicate his vote, then, of course, all men whose votes are influenced by personal regard and respect for some one else must be set aside. Indeed, it is chiefly when men begin to argue the question of suffrage for women that a grave doubt of their own competency to vote arises.

But if wives are to be excluded because they will vote with their husbands, upon what ground shall we disfranchise those who have no husbands to vote with? Shall we deprive them of the ballot as a punishment for not having husbands to deprive them of it? The same excellent argument would apply to their property; and we ought to confiscate the earnings of spinsters because they have no husbands to manage their money for them. Indeed, the arguments all tend to prove that women should be in a perpetual prostration of gratitude that men suffer them to exist upon any terms whatever

Certainly no really great movement ever proceeded so steadily and swiftly in the face of curious difficulties as that of woman suffrage in this country. It has had the most whimsical and often absurd and repulsive advocacy. It has often seemed to be the very politics of the moon. Extravagance and folly have been so hopelessly combined in its behalf that many of its truest friends have wondered that it was not pushed from decent and candid consideration. But such friends cannot too constantly remember that it is the history of every movement which is an appeal to pure reason.

There are no guns or clubs behind the demand for this extension of the suffrage. It is conducted wholly within the domain of intelligence. And if riddled with ridicule, let any sceptic recall the biginnings of Methodism. Read Sydney Smith, and wonder how an intelligent and liberal man could deride some of the noblest and best men that ever lived. The history of the movement for the extension of suffrage to women, like all the other great movements in this country, shows to every youth that he who is hospitable to a liberty which is ridiculed entertains angels unawares It is safe to heed the counsel of Condorcet, "Do not choose a man who has ever taken side against the liberty of any portion of mankind."—

A SINGULAR DISPUTE.—The New York Tribune of the 20th ult. has the following

Soon after the Chicago fire the Legislature of the District of Columbia appropriated $100,000 for the relief of the sufferers, and a committee of citizens was appointed to disburse the money Requisitions from the Mayor of Chicago, from time to time, were honored to the amount of about $75 000, but the remaining $25 000, more or less, was never called for and remained in the hands of the relief committee Within a day or two Charles G Hammond of Chicago, the treasurer in that city, of the relief fund has arrived here and demands the remainder of Washington's subscription for the purpose of turning it over to Boston It is charged that the money has already been used on the public works here, and cannot be forthcoming At any rate payment to Col Hammond has been refused Whether he has the Mayor's authority or not is not stated. Some of the members of the District Committee say that the remainder of the original amount is invested in bonds in New York, and will be paid on adequate authority. As Chicago does not need it, and has so announced to the country, the Committee profess to be in doubt as to their authority in the matter They say, too, if the money is to go to Boston, it should go as coming from Washington and not from Chicago

Tonnage to Arrive

We predicted some time since that the high tariff for freights would attract the attention of ship owners toward our coast and the following list of vessels coming this way, verifies our assertion. The Commercial Reporter has gathered the names of the following vessels to arrive here between this date and the first of June 187[illegible]

Home Produce Market.

WHEAT.—We are still unable to quote the market as settled though but one figure $1 45 per cental has ruled here during the past week Advices from the interior indicate rather more activity but only where buyers have come into a peculiar competition has there been any perceptible advance upon the figures heretofore given. The demand here is rather better than it was a few days ago, but from what we can learn our dealers here have not yet full confidence in the permanency of the reported rise in San Francisco

OATS—We heard of but few transactions to-day, and appearances indicate a turn in the market in San Francisco, though our quotations of yesterday remain unchanged.

FLOUR—The demand continues fair, and our figures of $5 for standard brands of extra, $4@4 50 choice country, and $3 75@4 for outside and superfine are still retained.

Other products are unchanged from yesterday's quotations

Third st., bet. Hill and Market streets,

SECOND DOOR FROM CORNER OF MARKET.

DR RESSER HAVING LOCATED HIMSELF IN Portland, permanently, makes both

Liver & Lung Diseases

A SPECIALTY,

And is now prepared to treat patients for those diseases

Not being fortunate enough to have treated a great many eminent and distinguished persons, whose names are most generally emblazoned to the world by advertising physicians, but at the same time I can produce numerous and voluntary testimonials from those I have treated for the above diseases.

It is well enough known throughout California that I am the possessor of a secret to prepare a medicine, purely vegetable, for the above diseases, and have made some of the

Most Remarkable Cures on Record,

And in cases which were entirely despaired of by other physicians

A Card to the Public.

Having learned that Dr H RESSER has located himself in Portland, I deem it my duty to the public, and more particularly those persons who may be afflicted as I have been After leaving Portland, a few months ago, I became afflicted with Epileptic Fits, and after having tried and consulted several distinguished physicians, without any benefit whatever, I was advised to call on Dr. H RESSER, who happened to be visiting Virginia City at the time on professional business. I lost no time in placing myself under the care of DR RESSER, and am now restored to perfect health I can most highly recommend DR RESSER to those who may be equally afflicted FREDERICK FORNER.

Other Testimony.

MR EDITOR I saw in your last issue of the Press a card written by Mr Robinson, and I deem it my duty also to make a similar statement, for the benefit of those who are troubled with disease of the lungs. Three years ago I commenced under the treatment of some of the most skillful physicians of the Atlantic States, who pronounced my case Bronchial Consumption After treating with them about two years, with but little benefit, I was advised a change of climate, which I made, and came to Santa Barbara about a year ago, with the hopes of a speedy recovery, but could not see that the change had been what I anticipated until a month since I commenced under the treatment of Dr RESSER, and have improved in health very much in that time, and am confident in a short time I will be restored to perfect health under his treatment. I cordially recommend DR RESSER to the public MRS M L REYNOLDS

Santa Barbara, June 21, 1871

Card.

ST CHARLES HOTEL,
SANTA BARBARA CAL May 25 1871

I consider it my duty to the public to make the following statement, hoping that some unfortunate invalid may be benefited by it Having been sick for some time with lung disease (or consumption) I applied to many physicians in San Francisco and other places, under whose treatment I found no relief A short time since I met Dr Resser here in Santa Barbara, and knowing of some of the wonderful cures he has made in different parts of the State I put myself under his treatment and commenced to improve immediately I can warmly recommend Dr. Resser to all who are afflicted with this dreadful disease, as he makes the lung and liver disease his specialty ELIJAH ROBINSON.

Card.

It is well known here that I have been under the doctors care for the last twelve months in San Francisco and here but could receive no benefit from any one When Dr Resser arrived here, a short time ago I put myself under his treatment and commenced to improve immediately and I am confident that in a short time I shall be restored to my health again I can highly recommend Dr Resser to the public COLEMAN O'DONNEL

Virginia City, Oct 15 1872

Card.

To remove all doubt from the public mind in relation to a question which has created some dispute in San Jose I feel it my duty to make the following public statement of facts It is well known that my wife was very low with consumption—so low in fact that I had given up all hope of her recovery I called on Dr H RESSER, who makes consumption his specialty and in two weeks time my wife's health had so improved that she was able to walk out and for the last three weeks has been on a visit to San Francisco, and is growing stronger every day I can recommend DR RESSER to all who are afflicted with diseases of the lungs MOSES CHADBOURNE,

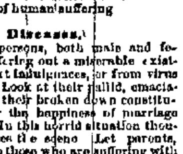
TO THE UNFORTUNATE.

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES!

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,



623 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco Established in 1854 for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhea Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated.

DR GIBBON has the pleasure of announcing that he has returned from visiting the principal Hospitals of Europe and has resumed practice at his Dispensary, 623 Kearny street, corner of Commercial, San Francisco, where his old patients and those requiring his services may find him.

The Doctor has spared neither time nor money in seeking out new remedies, and has returned with increased facilities for the alleviation of human suffering

Horrible Diseases,

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system! Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible, life-destroying maladies—see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late Send them immediately to DR GIBBON, a physician who has made private diseases his especial study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate case, without mercury or any injurious drugs It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self abuse. This solitary vice or depraved sexual indulgence, is practiced by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz Sallow countenance dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers a dislike to form new acquaintances disposition to shun society loss of memory hectic flushes pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, fetid breath cough, consumption night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity If relief be not obtained, apply immediately either in person or by letter and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr G will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of the complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks.

MARRIED MEN,

Or those who contemplate marriage who are suffering under any of these fearful maladies, should not forget the sacred responsibility resting upon them nor delay to obtain immediate relief.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

CURED AT HOME.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Dr Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded, free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions By inclosing Ten Dollars coin, in registered letter through the Postoffice or through Wells, Fargo & Co., a package of medicine will be forwarded to any part of the Union

All communications strictly confidential.

Caution to the Unfortunate.

Beware of the San Francisco quacks and pretenders who, with bogus sworn-to certificates, dupe the unwary some of the self styled doctors, whose names are to be found in the daily and weekly newspapers of San Francisco and other places, are tradesmen and became too lazy too work at their trades. Some are tinsmiths, shoemakers, newspaper carriers, intelligence office keepers, etc. The only way to avoid imposition is to make inquiry—it will cost you nothing, and may save you many regrets, for as advertising physicians in eight cases out of ten are bogus, there is no safety in trusting any of them until you know who and what they are. Dr Gibbon does not deceive people by exhibiting bogus titles, certificates, pretended patients' letters &c Dr Gibbon will assist any person who may call at his offices of his ability to treat diseases that he proposes to cure.

Address DR J F GIBBON, 623 Kearney street, corner Commercial, San Francisco, Post Office Box 1,957

REMEMBER TO PUT BOX 1,957 ON THE LETTER.

Consultations FREE.

Correspondents will please inform DR. GIBBON that they read his advertisement in the Daily Oregonian
